Criticism happens when yields of a framework are directed back as contributions as a major aspect of a chain of circumstances and end results that structures a circuit or loop. The framework would then be able to be said to input into itself. The idea of circumstances and end results must be dealt with deliberately when connected to input frameworks:

Basic causal thinking about an input framework is troublesome in light of the fact that the main framework impacts the second and second framework impacts the principal, prompting a round contention. This makes thinking in light of circumstances and end results precarious, and it is important to break down the framework all in all.
